

BABY SWALLOWS PIN; POINT IN THROAT MAY CAUSE DEATH

Surgeons Remove Part Of Steel After X-Ray Shows
Location.

With a nursery pin lodged in its throat, the nine-months-old baby girl of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben A. Bogley, of 2026 O street northwest, is lingering between life and death.

Sunday night at 8 o'clock the child managed in some way to get a nursery pin loose from a portion of its garments. Later Mr. and Mrs. Bogley heard the infant struggling, and non going to the cradle found that it was strangling. The child was taken to the Georgetown Hospital, where, after several examinations by attending physicians, it was impossible to ascertain the trouble.

An X-ray examination located the pin in the throat, at the base of the windpipe. It had been swallowed while open, and the sharp pin had lacerated the channel of the throat in the throes of strangulation.

Dr. Albert Craig, assisted by Dr. Donahue and Dr. Gwyn, of Georgetown Hospital, have taken a portion of the pin out, but have not been able yet to find the point.

The child is resting easily today, and the physicians have decided to wait until some symptoms will indicate the location of the steel point.

The Arrival of the North Atlantic Fleet or Battleships at Hampton Roads August 24 will prove a great attraction for Washingtonians, the great draft of these powerful engines of war not permitting them to come to this city. A visit to one of our dreadnaughts alone will prove very instructive and interesting. Certain hours every day are set apart for visitors, and boats to and from the ships can be secured at Old Point Comfort wharf. The Norfolk & Washington Line are now featuring their week-end trips, including accommodations at the famous Chamberlin Hotel and Ocean View. City Ticket Office at 720 14th street, Bond Building, will gladly furnish detailed information. -Advt.
